Happy Diwali!

The children have loved learning about the religious festival of Diwali this week. They enjoyed crushing chalk and mixing it with water to create their own paint. They then used this to paint special Rangoli patterns on the ground outside. We learnt that Diwali is a festival of light and that houses are often decorated with special lamps called Divas. The children enjoyed making their own Divas out of playdough. We would like to wish all of our families who are celebrating, a very happy Diwali!

Board games

In maths this week, we have been playing games that involve rolling a dice and moving a counter along a track. It would be great for children to practice playing games like this at home to help with turn taking and building maths skills such as subitising.

A request...

Next week we will be learning about special occasions and we will be setting up a special birthday party role play area!

If you have any old birthday banners, balloons, party hats, party plates/cups, table cloths etc. then we would really appreciate any

On Seesaw this week...

We would love to see photographs of any special occasions that are celebrated at home: e.g. birthdays, religious festivals. You could also share photographs of achievements you have celebrated e.g. swimming badges, sports medals or certificates.

We would also love to see photographs from your weekend - especially if you visit a bonfire/firework display!
